

Schoolteacher Mary M. Holst took this photograph of Fishers School students about 1919, including Norman Powell, Billy Simmons, and Henry Tuttle. Fishers School pupils sometimes included the children of quarry workers or indeed the immigrant workers themselves, who sought to learn English. Fishers had no outdoor play equipment. During recess, the kids dug holes in the dirt or ate their lunches while balancing on the fence rail. (Courtesy Norman Powell.)